head and she fell dead. Paul, who had witnessed the scene, took a revolver and shotgun and started to average his wife.

As the Italian was trying to escape Paul fired several shots from his revolver, but missed. Pellegrino succeeded in barricading himself in his room, and Paul stood guard in the hallway. The people about the house were terrorized, and would not interfere. After half an hour Pellegrino, hearing no sound, stuck his head through the door. Paul, quick as a flash, fired, killguard in the hallway. The people about the house were terrorized, and would not interfere. After half an hour Pellegrino, hearing no sound, stuck his head through the door. Paul, quick as a flash, fired, killing the murderer of his wife in his tracks. After examining the body to see that no life remained, Paul picked up his wife's dead body and tenderly carried it to his home. Surrounded by his three small children, the officers, when they came to arrest him, found him bending, weeping, over the remains. The residents of the village condemn Pellegrino and uphold Paul, who bears a good reputation.
